

TRAIN WRECKS CLAIM A VERY HEAVY TOLL

NORTHWESTERN SYSTEM HAS TWO SERIOUS WRECKS WITH MANY INJURED

KILLED IN ACCIDENTS.

Sunday Morning Wreck on Lake Shore Division—One Today on Omaha Branch—Other Storm News.

La Crosse, Sept. 2.—Train No. 10 on the Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis and Omaha railway running between Minneapolis and Chicago, is reported to have run into a washout at Little Lemonwair creek, one mile north of Hustler, Wis., at 5 o'clock this morning.

A telephone message from Hustler, which is between Camp Douglas and Elroy, says three persons including the engineer are dead. Part of the train passed over the washout in safety.

The washout followed one of the heaviest cloudbursts experienced in this section of Wisconsin this year. Help has gone out from Hustler, and doctors have been called for along the line.

The full extent of the disaster not being yet known at the station.

Sunday's Wreck.

Lyndhurst, Wis., Sept. 2.—Six persons were killed and twenty-one injured when five cars of a fast Chicago-bound sleeping car train of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad were plunged down a twenty-five-foot embankment in the midst of the Wisconsin woods, five miles from Shawano at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Seven Pullman cars and the special car of W. D. Cantillon, general manager of the road, in which his family and a party of friends, remained on the track, the occupants being severely shaken up, but none seriously injured.

The accident was caused by the washout of a bridge spanning a small stream, which had been swept away by a heavy cloudburst only thirty minutes before the arrival of the train.

Almost every member of the train crew was instantly killed. Only the occupants of the smoking car and the South westbound train were saved. Those in the one Pullman car that went over the embankment were thrown out of their berths, but, owing to the steel structure of the car, it was not smashed, and its occupants escaped with slight injuries.

The train is a palace car train, consisting almost entirely of sleeping cars enroute back to Chicago and the South westbound train, and families of the rich who have been spending the latter part of the summer in the Northern woods.

Occurring in the dead of night, in the midst of the dense woods and five miles from the nearest station, it was hours before help could arrive.

Alex Schoel's, a mail clerk, was pinned under the wreckage for several hours, while every moment it was feared that fire would start in the debris. He later died.

General Manager Cantillon took personal charge of the relief work.

On the Soo.

Stevens Point, Wis., Sept. 2.—The Soo line track was washed out for about 600 feet near Cebraht one mile from Ladysmith, on account of the heavy down pour yesterday.

The velvet special running over this division was thrown off the track, but no cars were overturned and no one was injured.

The tracks between Medford and Chisago, mostly underwater and the south bound Ashland train over this line was off the track near Chelsea. The train was delayed about 16 hours. The storm did no damage.

Loss at Manitowoc.

Manitowoc, Sept. 2.—Lightning caused the loss of a large barn on the farm of Conrad Kieselmeier, of Newton, during a heavy rain storm Sunday morning. The loss being about $2,000, partially insured. Live stock in the barn was saved and adjoining buildings were protected, after a hard fight.

There has been a larger loss from lightning in Manitowoc this year than any previous year, it is claimed.

Storm at Oshkosh.

Oshkosh, Sept. 2.—Early this morning Winnebago county was swept by one of the severest rain and electrical storms of a stormy summer, damage being confined principally to corn fields and to grain stacks which have become so thoroughly soaked that threshing will be delayed for days. No train wrecks are reported.

REBELS MURDER MAN WHO REPELS ATTACK UPON HIS DAUGHTERS

Joshua Stevens, American Settler in Colona Pacheco, Meets Tragic Fate at Soldiers' Hands.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 2.—Murdered by rebel soldiers while protecting his two daughters was the fate of Joshua Stevens, an American settler of Colona Pacheco, according to an authentic report received by O. P. Brown, business agent here of the Mormon colonies in Mexico. It was at first reported that Stevens, who was killed last week had met death at the hands of an American, but this story was sent it is said to avoid troubles with the rebels who will investigate the American settlements to the south-east of Juarez. Two rebels visited the Stevens home with the apparent intention on the two young women of the household. Stevens met the intruders with a shot gun and escorted them to the limits of his property, an orchard. According to the story told by his daughters one of the Mexicans drew a sword bayonet from his belt and thrust it into the American's body. Stevens fired and fell dead over the body of the man whom he had killed. The other rebel fled. Details of the case have been investigated by Junius Romney, president of the colony. It is said to be the fifth murder of American settlers by rebels in this district and Romney has urged that no families return to the colonies until quiet is restored. It is declared that federal soldiers strung out between Juarez and Chihuahua have not left the railway and the American colonies are absolutely unprotected.

PROHIBITIONISTS URGE VOTE AT PRIMARIES.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 2.—From the state prohibition headquarters in this city quantities of letters and printed matter urging the faithful to attend the primaries tomorrow are being sent out to encourage a big vote. Two years ago they got barely enough votes to name a state ticket, and lost out on two state nominees, but this year, owing to the amendment reducing the required percentage, the leaders feel sure of polling enough votes. They are much encouraged by the primary returns from Michigan, where the "dry" equalled the Bull Moose primary vote. A special appeal is also being made by State Chairman J. B. Smith for the election of party committeemen at the coming primaries.

To strengthen the party's propaganda work, the state chairman recently acquired a printing plant, where a new party organ, "The Partisan," will be issued. The speaking plans for the campaign will involve auto trips, special meetings and extended itineraries by the "dry" orators. Charles D. Newell of Indiana is in the state for several engagements. ## WILSON PICKS FLAWS IN PLANKS OF THE PROGRESSIVE PARTY

Declares That Labor Stand is Merely "Declaration of Sympathy"—Assails Minimum Wage.

Buffalo, Sept. 2.—Governor Woodrow Wilson today analyzed the third party platform in its relation to the laboring man. The occasion of his speech was a Labor Day celebration under the auspices of the United Trade and Labor Council. It was the first expression from the democratic candidate on the merits of the progressive platform. The governor said that while on the one hand was to be found their "warm sympathy with practically every project of social betterment," that party was merely a "proclamation of sympathy" while the real program lay elsewhere. "Where the tariff and the trusts are spoken of."

The governor assailed the minimum wage idea declaring that employers would take occasion to bring their wage scale as nearly as they could down to the level of the minimum permitted by law. With the idea of a federal commission to regulate monopoly, he declared the plan suggested would not only legalize monopoly, but give the chief employers of the country a "tremendous authority behind them." What the employers do will have the license of the federal government including the right to pay wages approved by the government said Governor Wilson. He pointed out that it always had been the policy of "the masters of consolidated industries" to undermine organized labor in a great many ways and that a plan of federal control as advocated by the new party "systematically subordinates workingmen to monopolies" and "looks strangely like economic mastery over the very lives and fortunes of those who do the daily work of the nation."

WIDOW WILL BE TRIED ON MURDER CHARGE

Mrs. Laura M. Reuter of Tulsa, Okla., Defendant—Crime Was Long Baffling Mystery.

Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 2.—Preparations are about completed for the trial of the Reuter murder case at the term of the superior court here this month. The defendants in the case are Laura M. Reuter, widow of the alleged victim, and Bud Bellow, Guy D. Mackenzie and Joe Baker.

The murder of Charles T. Reuter, who was a well known lawyer, is one of the most baffling mysteries the police of this city have dealt with. He was killed in his bedroom at his home on the night of May 5 last. Valuable diamonds he wore and a large sum of money were missing. Mrs. Reuter was locked in her bedroom across the hall at the time and her screams aroused the neighborhood. A tall man, masked, with a red light dangling from a belt, was seen running from the house.

The next day Mackenzie, Bellow and Baker were arrested on the theory that Reuter's murder was the result of a conspiracy, with a robbery as a blind to conceal the real motive. Not until the preliminary hearing of the three men began was Mrs. Reuter served with a warrant charging her with being a party to the alleged conspiracy.

PENNSYLVANIA FLOOD COSTS TWENTY LIVES

TORRENTS OF RAIN FALL IN SECTION SOUTH AND WEST OF PITTSBURGH CAUSING MANY DEATHS.

HEAVY PROPERTY LOSS

Houses Are Undermined and Towns Are Destroyed by Raging Mountains—Railroads Washed Out and Traffic Delayed.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 2.—Twenty persons are known to have been drowned and many other persons are missing as the result of a series of storms that swept over western Pennsylvania and the Panhandle of West Virginia early today. Through trains were marooned during the night in the flood districts. Many manufacturing plants are under water and the property damage will be heavy.

Reports from Colliers in the Panhandle of West Virginia, are that nine persons have been drowned there and many more are missing but the exact loss of life cannot be ascertained until searching parties along the valley of Hannon's creek have completed their work.

The storms came after a day of unusual heat and but with little warning. Rain fell in torrents and small houses were swept away and lives lost before the people were aware the flood was upon them.

After spending its force south and west of Pittsburgh the storm swung north to Butler county where great damage was done but so far as known no lives were lost. Oil derricks were blown down, small streams flooded and scores of persons spent the night in interurban cars while repairs were being made to lines and tracks.

The Pittsburgh baseball club was on one of the trains delayed by the Colliers flood and were not scheduled to reach the city until one this afternoon, compelling postponement of the morning game with Chicago at Forbes field.

BIBLE LIVING BOOK OF ABIDING VALUE

MODERN RESEARCH DISCLOSES NEW TRUTH AND EXPLAINS THE OBSCURE.

HAS MESSAGE FOR ALL

The Rev. Dr. Beaton Preaches Illuminating Sermon on "The Bible in Modern Life."

"The Bible is a living book," said the Rev. Dr. Beaton, pastor of the Congregational church in his sermon last evening on "The Bible in Modern Life." "It is essentially a modern book, modern in the sense that it has vital truths and a vital message for modern times. Modern scholarship has served to disclose new truths, to affirm the old truths, and to illuminate and interpret the passages that were dark and obscure. It is for these reasons, and others that we need a change in the methods and the enlargement of opportunities for the study and interpretation of the Bible, both in the public schools, and with a decline in the study of the Bible in the home, the church is called upon to do more to make the Bible a living book to the present generation. Its responsibility is heavier than ever before, but its opportunities have also increased."

"There are signs that the Bible as literature is coming into greater favor. Bible speech, Bible phraseology, and figures of speech are heard and read more frequently than in many years past. The Bible pendulum of popular approval is swinging back to a worthy appreciation."

"Young people will have to be interested in the Bible in a different manner than formerly. Modern education has made this necessary. The Bible teacher will have to make use of the most recent and authoritative information about the Bible and its makers, learn about the disclosures of archaeology, and the results of modern scholarship. The human interest side of the Bible will have to be emphasized. The Bible was not written by priests or professional religious people. The only books of the Bible written by priests are the Chronicles, and they are the books that are least read. The greater part of the Bible was written by men not ecclesiastics or officials in the church. The Bible persists because it reflects their passions, hopes, and aspirations, and the inspiration of God. It is not a priest's book, but a poet's book, a poet's book because he had a vision of God. The greatest modern books of devotion were not written by the higher clergy. Thomas à Kempis, the writer of 'The Imitation of Christ,' was a humble monk."

"During the centuries that have passed, the Bible has received an impression of priestly authority. Many of us have come to think of it as a unit in authorship, created as a whole, and passed on 'ready-made' to the care and custody of the church. The Bible is more than a book. It is a whole history; it is made up of many books; it contains history, biography, law, anecdote and parable, poetry, and sacred ritual."

"On the other hand the Bible is a book. 'What makes a book? Unity' of theme. If the theme is treated with consistency and a singleness of purpose it constitutes a book. Macbeth, for instance, is a story of ambition, Othello, a tale of jealousy. Each introduces many characters and incidents, but all revolve about and contribute to a single theme."

"There is no book that has so definite a theme and yields so definite an impression as the Bible. The theme is salvation, and the central figure is Jesus Christ."

"You will find in some of our libraries frescoes illustrating the progress of art or literature from the earliest times to the present. Through the orderly arrangement of the pictures you can trace their development unbroken. This is precisely the case with the Bible. A well-defined thread of connection binds all the parts, and the progress of its theme is continuous and unbroken."

"In our interpretation of the Bible we are inclined to take statements too literally. We forget that the Bible is a translation of a translation and that it is difficult to convey thoughts precisely through such an involved medium. People have never understood the Bible in exactly the same manner. There were sects of Jews in the time of Jesus, the Sadducees, the Pharisees, and others, and Jesus recognized them. How did he appeal to them? By appealing to an authority recognized by all. He was not a made. It is this very fact that distinguishes his teaching from that that was before him. He did not condemn those who differed with him, but plainly showed them their recognized authority; the scriptures that they were in error. Our interpretation of the Bible should be made in the manner and spirit in which Jesus made it."

WISCONSIN A STATE OF HOME OWNERS

Lowest Percentage of Tenancy of All Old States Except New England.

The subjoined table gives the total number of farms in each state, the number owned by tenants, and the percentage of the latter. It will be seen that Wisconsin has the lowest percentage of tenants of all the older states. In the western states a large portion of the farms are in the hands of homesteaders who are compelled by law to operate their own farms; for which reason they should not be considered in this connection. This gives Wisconsin the position of a state of home owners. The table follows:

UNCLE SAM TAKES A HAND IN SCHOOLS

Vacation Trip on the Profits of School Farming Explained in Detail By Government.

To prove that farming—the right kind of farming—pays, is one of the tasks which the rural school has been gradually set itself. It is particularly essential to make the school children realize the money value of agriculture, not as a theory but as a practical fact, and one of the best ways for demonstrating it has been shown to be to let the children actually farm a bit of ground and collect the proceeds. Recently the United States Commissioner of Education, Dr. P. P. Claxton, had occasion to welcome a party of southern boys and girls who were on a sightseeing tour of Washington with money earned in their own farming.

"Real farming did it," said Dr. Claxton, in describing the experiment. "The money earned from their individual garden patches in connection with the study of up-to-date farming paid the expenses of those 22 Virginia school children. The children came from the Second Congressional District Agricultural School at Driver, near Norfolk. The party was in charge of Mr. J. B. L. De Jarnette, the principal of the school, and he was a busy man indeed during the three days spent in seeing the sights of the Nation's capital."

"Vegetables and other produce paid the full cost of the trip which was just $13.75 for each pupil, by the way. This amount was only a comparatively small part of their total earnings for the year. The children come from one of the best gardening regions in the south, and their school has a unique place in that particular community. The school has an instructor in agriculture, who teaches three days a week and spends the other three days in farm demonstration work, applying on the actual farms of the district the theory he imparts in school."

Further inquiry showed that this is not the first time the children have learned in a cash return. Each student makes regularly a profit of from $25 to $100 on the individual garden patch he cultivates. In addition, the children help in working a school farm, which after paying all expenses including the wages of a man who serves both as a farm hand and school janitor, shows a profit of about $200. Mr. De Jarnette is confident that with a 75-acre farm, which he hopes to have soon, his boys will be able to earn their own living entirely while attending school.

The State of Virginia is among the rapidly increasing number of States that are beginning to realize the importance of adequate agricultural education, and money has been appropriated to aid the school. There have also been private benefactions. A new $25,000 building is to be dedicated in September, and Dr. Claxton has promised to be present at the ceremonies.

The experiment at Driver is only one of many indications of what the American rural schools can and should do. All over the country efforts are being made to bring home to the country districts the significance and value of agriculture. The rural school is the essential link in the chain, and the United States Bureau of Education is endeavoring to give this fact home so deep it will never be forgotten, for the Bureau maintains that the rural school must provide the kind of training that will not only fit boys and girls for rural life, but will serve to interpret life in the country so attractively that when the children grow to manhood and womanhood they will be glad to remain on the farm.

CONDENSED MILK DEMAND IN EXCESS OF OUTPUT

The following item is clipped from this week's issue of The Denmark Enterprise, regarding the milk condensing plant recently completed there by the Denmark Construction Company, who have the contract for the new Footville plant:

"The local Condensed Milk Company is fast gaining a demand for their produce, as is evidenced by the orders received daily. The company now has on hand orders for over thirteen car loads of the local product. By the last of the week, four car loads will be shipped this week. If the demand continues to increase, the local Company will be obliged to secure more milk and probably will have a milk train put on to get the milk from other communities. The Denmark Enterprise."

Stomach Trouble Disappears Though By Magic

NO NEED TO SUFFER LONGER FROM THIS OVER-PREVALENT COMPLAINT. CHIROPRACTIC WILL STOP YOUR TROUBLES.

Give your stomach a chance. The way you cram it full of heavy, soggy, rich food stuffs is good and sufficient reason why it does not respond as it should. If it were in perfect condition, it would assimilate the heaviest foods easily. But it is not. It is weakened through lack of nerve force. One of the vertebrae of your spine is out of line, subluxated and is shutting off the flow of nerve force to the stomach. Chiropractic will correct your spine and the new life to the stomach will give you cause to rejoice.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am 50 years of age and for the past twelve years have been a constant sufferer from Nervousness, Constipation and Stomach Trouble. During the time of my illness I have treated with a great number of prominent physicians, have used with drugs, patent medicines, etc. From time to time I would get a little temporary relief, but every experience made me feel less and less hopeful of ever getting my health back. In the early part of last Spring I was for seven weeks laid up and unable to work. I had read and heard from others about the work the Chiropractor was doing but was skeptical about his claims being fulfilled. As a last resort I concluded to give him a trial. The result of that decision has been what I have so long sought, HEALTH. In less than a week after I submitted to the Chiropractic adjustments I was able to work and in three weeks time, was enjoying better health than for 12 years. I cannot too strongly recommend the Chiropractor and the wonderful value of Chiropractic.

When the last session of the California legislature passed the Otis Walker anti-betting bill, horse racing in that state languished, sickened and died. Now an effort is being made to revive the sport, and a referendum vote on betting will be held in November. The argument under this made to California is that the objectionable features surrounding gambling on horse races will be eliminated.

Packey's climb up the pugilistic ladder has been little short of marvelous. Since he started boxing eight years ago, the best that an opponent has been able to get with him has been a draw decision. In nine cases out of ten, McFarland has either knocked out his man or finished so far ahead that there could be no question concerning the decision.

HANSONS WIN GAME BY NARROW MARGINS

Gazette Men Springs Surprise But Lose 5 to 4—Y. M. C. A. Dashes Machine Company's Hopes.

The Hanson men had a close call in their game with the Gazette team at Athletic park Saturday afternoon, but they managed to pull out of several bad places on the better end of a 5 to 4 score. O'Hara on the mound for the printers did remarkable work, but was accorded poor support at times which combined with the inability to hit at opportune moments made the result disastrous for the newspaper men.

The teams were composed as follows:

Hanson Co.	Gazette Co.
Dillon	Haise
Hanson	Hovehard
Miller	Flaming
H. Kressin	Lindley
Doran	G. Schmidt
A. Kressin	P. Schmidt
Hell	Sullivan
Britt	O'Hara

Y. M. C. A. Wins Easily.

The Y. M. C. A. easily defeated the Machine Company team in the first game at Athletic park and the only other game of the day. The score was 7 to 1 and dashed whatever hopes the implement-makers ever had of securing third position in the race especially as the Hansons, their deadly rivals, were lucky enough to land their game. Greene for the association pitched a star game and held his opponents to three scattered bingles in the seven innings. Devine for the Machinists allowed but six hits. The lineup follows:

Y. M. C. A.	Machine Co.
Porter	Sullivan
Hill	Howard
Whitely	Holtz

CAMPAIGNS FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Eleanor Brannon. Eleanor Brannon of New York is one of the foremost fighters in the woman suffrage cause, and took an important part in the Ohio suffrage campaign. Just closed. Matter of Duty. That which is called considering our duty in a particular case, is very often nothing but endeavoring to explain it away.

Vocation. Every man has his own vocation. There is one direction in which all space is open to him. He has faculties silently inviting him thither to endless exertion. He is like a ship in a river; he runs against obstructions on every side but one; on that side all obstruction is taken away, and he sweeps serenely over a deepening channel into an infinite sea.—R. W. Emerson.

The Wealth of a Man. The thoughts of his heart, these are the wealth of a man.—Burmese Saying.

Would Welcome Such Gems. The legal tangle that has resulted from the pretensions of a man that he could make diamonds is interesting to women who hope that the man can prove his ability to manufacture the crystalline form of carbon, as the real gems are growing scarcer every year, and the price threatens to become prohibitive.

Housework a Noble Occupation. When properly practised, housework is as noble an occupation as any girl or woman can undertake.—Ethel Senior.

Horrid. Valet (entering chamber)—I heard you scream, sir. "What's the blooming row, sir?" Algy—"You'd better sit up with me until morning, James. I just had the awfullest nightmare! I dreamed I was walking along the avenue without me walking stick, James!"—Chicago News.

The Limit. Howell—"I don't mind getting a lemon now and then, but—" Powell—"But what?" Howell—"I think it is overdoing the thing when the lemon has been squeezed."

THE UNIVERSITY.
Ancient the problem of the University the question of divorcing it from politics, the following editorial from the Wausau Daily Record Herald explains itself:

As we anticipated the reply made by the president of the board of regents of the state university, Mr. James F. Trotman, to the criticism of certain members of the faculty of that institution made by the editor of the Record-Herald in his address at Milwaukee last week, is that it was based upon "misinformation or willful misrepresentation." We say anticipated, because it has been our experience, during a great many years, that when people of the "Holler than thou" stripe are criticised, their "refuge" is always that the "other fellow" is not telling the truth.

Mr. Trotman, who is a most estimable gentleman, and an efficient member of the board of regents; evidently realizes that the board made a mistake when it allowed itself to become the vassal of the sociologists and socialists who suggested the so-called national newspaper conference; the majority of the board, and he among them, did not look beyond the surface of things, did not analyze the motives of those who formulated the plan, did not understand that the conference was framed solely to allow the sensationalists to display their wares under the auspices of the university which would give them the prestige of which they were so sorely in need. Having realized his error, Mr. Trotman, being human, does not like to admit it, and therefore relies upon a glittering "generosity" to offset the criticism made.

The trouble with the university, or at least with that part of it which is so constantly seeking notoriety, is that its self-seeking members of the faculty, and this is also true of some of the regents, are laboring under the belief that the institution is a sacred thing, that no one should question whatever is done beneath its holy portals; that whatever the university—and particularly that part of it which is devoted thoroughly to telling other people how they should live, how they should breathe, eat, drink, and house themselves; and to attacking existing conditions no matter how perfect they may be—does, is, and must be right; and therefore above criticism. Nothing must be said about the enormous amount of money spent; nothing must be mentioned about the buying of nearby farms at exorbitant prices; nothing must be said about the continual sending of members of the faculty to foreign lands, to do research work; for their own personal benefit; attention must not be called to the teaching of socialism and socialistic ideas; in fact, whatever emanates from the university, must necessarily be right.

The time has gone by when a critic of the university can be branded an enemy of the cause of higher education, and the university clique make the epithet stick. And, likewise, the time when calling down certain members of the faculty for their foolish acts is looked upon as an attack upon the university, has also gone by. Fair, candid criticism is what the situation needs. And it will avail nothing for its defenders to cry "You're another!" Let them investigate some of these things, before rushing into print and emulating David, when he said, "All men are liars."

The University of Wisconsin is a state institution, supported, at an enormous expense, by the people of the state; its faculty are servants of the state; the university is for the people and not solely for the members of the faculty, as some of them seem to think; the people of the state, who pay the bills, have the right to say how it shall be conducted, have the right to criticize. And, in the future as in the past, when criticism is needed, there will be found a few who have the nerve to make it.

CONGRESSIONAL FOLLIES OF 1912
It is not surprising, perhaps, that the long drawn out session of Congress, adjourning on the eve of a Presidential election, should have been characterized by inefficiency and failure. With the Democrats in control of the House, the Republican majority in the Senate divided and the President at loggerheads with those representing the progressive spirit in both parties in each branch of Congress, there was a splendid opportunity for the playing of politics.

And playing politics was the principal business of the session. Much of the legislation attempted was stamped unmistakably with insincerity. Public interests were forgotten in the general scramble to obtain partisan and factional advantage in the coming election. Yet the present Congress had before it from the start the duty of accomplishing constructive legislation of a high order. The tariff, the trusts, the monetary system and conservation of natural resources demanded immediate and intelligent treatment.

But Congress failed miserably to meet the requirements laid upon it. Tariff bills were framed in the Democratic House and passed, but with the full knowledge that the President would not sign them. They were designed primarily to "put him in the hole" and thereby increase the chances for a Democratic national victory in November. The other great questions needing their attention were practically ignored. Much of the energy of the House was devoted, outside of the political maneuvers over the tariff, to investigation which it was hoped would provide campaign material, but which failed to yield results of much value even from the partisan standpoint.

There have been Congresses almost as bad as this. In the period following the close of the civil war there were times when the House and Senate were at swords' points with the President and when filibustering tactics threatened to throttle the government by withholding appropriations. But for perversity and petty juggling with legislation demanded by the people, the session just ended is in a class by itself.

If it takes a "statesmanlike" mind to decide whether you are for Taft or Wilson or McKinley for heaven's sake vote for a republican. There are two avowed republicans on the legislative ticket in the first assembly district north and Kennedy. In the second district you will find Smith and Strong on the same basis. With two candidates to choose from the voters of each district should not have hard work in deciding who is their choice.

It is an old maxim but read it once again. "Beware of the wolf in sheep clothing." The man who offers you a lot for nothing, using high sounding phrases and "statesmanlike" platitudes, is not the man you can trust with your business affairs. You want to send to Madison a man who is not tied down to the string of the apron of the income tax.

England, or a good part of it, is said to be under water because it rained six inches in one day over there. Well, it might be better to get it all at once. It seems as if it had rained here something like an inch a day for more than twenty days.

New York doctors are puzzled by the fact that a man can live with part of his brain torn away. Strange, isn't it, when you're willing to swear that you know several persons in good health who are "apparently" without any brains?

There is the question of sheriff office to be considered tomorrow. Perhaps if Beloit has a candidate that it calls Beloit's own maybe the rest of the county can find a man to be the real county's choice.

It looks as though Beloit was seeking to hog all the county offices and maybe the rest of the county will have something to say "after" tomorrow's primaries. There is such a thing as local pride after all.

A vote for Mr. Whitte tomorrow means a vote for your own pocket-book in the repeal of the income tax law. Count your pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.
Fight. Be a soldier. To go.

The modest little admiral who sent the Russian fleet to the bottom of the sea of Japan in the most spectacular fight of the age, like most great commanders, is a man of few words.

During his recent visit to this country he gave a short interview, stating that the soldierly qualities in a man make him successful in both war and peace, adding:

"Fight. Be a soldier."

The famous admiral clearly sees that all life is a battle and that a man must either fight and win or run away and fail.

Where is your battlefield?

As a captain said to the recruit who inquired where he should fight: "Go in anywhere. The fighting is good all along the line."

The question is, Are you willing to fight?

If so there are foes of the common good, fierce fighters, who are ready to meet you, a soldier of the common good.

Are you eager to contend for the higher things of life? When innocence is trampled on and honesty is exploited for selfish purposes does your throat swell with resentment?

Then fight.

The moral courage that endures hardship for the sake of righteousness is infinitely nobler and rarer than mere physical bravery.

Moreover—

There are foes within you as dangerous as those without.

You may fight with sloth, or with passion, or with narrowness of spirit, or with selfishness, or a myriad of other things.

Beat them down, else they will ruin your life.

Fight. Be a soldier.

Life is filled with sorries, and skirmishes, and deadly onslaughts, and bayonet charges, and pitched battles, and weary marches, and defeats and victories.

Fight.

Fight every hideous thing that is the moral equivalent of war.

Fight public wrong full in the face and with all your might.

Fight the foes within you—selfishness and egotism and low desire.

Fight. Be a soldier.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT
By ROY K. MOULTON

From Our London Correspondent:
I have mentioned before the mud-puddle over which Queen Elizabeth once crossed with the assistance of Sir Walter Raleigh. I not only bought a place of the cloak, but I have seen the mudpuddle. Although this incident occurred many hundred years ago they keep the mudpuddle intact. In dry weather they are obliged to moisten it from the hydrant near by, but otherwise it is a genuine mudpuddle.

The English are a very polite people. If you ask them a question, they will not knock you down or kick you into the gutter. No, indeed, they will only stare at you as though you were a strange animal from the island of Zanzibar and give you an evasive answer such as "Go to thunder" or something like that. They also have a sense of humor. I tried this out thoroughly on a porter in the hotel. I used the ancient gag which used to delight the audiences of Barlow, Primrose and West.

Call me a cab, I said.
"You are a bloomin' keb, sir. Haw! haw!" he replied, without stopping more than ten minutes to think.

I am not expecting to stay here very long. If I stay a week, it is going to cost me five pounds and I haven't more than a half pound of money in my clothes, including the nickles and pennies.

Hayin' Time.
All the treestoads are a yellin'.
And the bees are buzzin' round.
The grasshoppers are hoppin' here and there upon the ground.
All the birds are sweetly singin'.
And all nature seems in tune.
Makes a fellow feel like worldin'.
Workin' morning night and noon.
And a sweet and wholesome odor is a-risin' from the earth.
And the old sun is a-shinin'.
Shinin' down for all it's worth.
All the country folks are hustlin'.
Startin' at the break of day.
Mother, she is busy cannin'.
Me and dad are makin' hay.

Tell you what, we got to go some for there ain't no time to lose.
Four o'clock-most every mornin'.
Finds a fellow in his shoes.
Then he got to feed the horses.
And the pigs and mind the sheep.
'Till he gets 'em to the pasture.
While you folks in town all sleep.
When it comes along to breakfast.
Feller's got an appetite.
And the salt pork and the taters.
And the beans taste out of sight.
Then we hustle for the madder.
And we hit her up 'till noon.
When the dinner bell starts ringin'.
And she never rings to soon.

Half an hour and then we're at it.
Pitchin' hay our very best.
And we never stop for nothin'.
'Till the sun sinks in the west.
Then we've got to feed the horses.
Milk the cows and get the sheep.
And about the hour of nine we're all in bed and fast asleep.
And we start right in once more.
Tell you what, a city feller.
Never'd think of gettin' sore.
On his job if he'd just travel.
Our here on some red-hot day.
And just stand around and look at.
Me and dad a-makin' hay.

PRIMARY CAMPAIGN PROVES EXPENSIVE

TOTAL OF OVER $1,200 SPENT TO DATE ACCORDING TO ACCOUNTS FILED WITH COUNTY CLERK.

LIVERMORE HIGH MAN

Beloit Candidate For County Treasurer Has Spent $217—Sheriff Race A Costly One—Nothing For Democrats.

A total of over $1,200 has been spent by candidates seeking nomination on the republican ticket in Rock county at the coming primary election which will be held tomorrow. With the exception of $1.12 spent by Robert Caldwell, democratic candidate for surveyor, the entire amount has been spent by the republican aspirants, as the democrats had no opposition for the nomination for county offices.

P. J. Livermore of Beloit, candidate for county treasurer, has spent the largest amount of any of the candidates to date according to his account filed at the office of the county clerk in accordance with the corrupt practices acts. The statement which is filed by Frank P. Starr, his campaign manager, shows an expenditure of $217.88. His opponent in the race, W. T. Sherman of the town of La Prairie, has spent $145. John T. Atkinson, of the town of La Prairie, republican candidate for county clerk, has spent the second largest amount. His campaign to date of filing last statement has cost $176.95. The largest one item listed on his last account is for $75 paid to the Rock county Banner, Clinton, Wis., under the head of "campaign work." The same paper has an advertisement of $14 against this candidate. H. W. Lee, the present incumbent of the office who seeks reelection, has spent $31.42.

The race for the republican nomination for sheriff has been an expensive one for the candidates. It has cost the five contestants as follows: Alvah D. Maxwell, Janesville, $42.14; Cash Whipple, Beloit, $122; George E. Merrill, Beloit, $110.00; R. M. Roach, town of Harmony, $139.20; John S. Leach, town of Avon, $81.70. Candidates for the assembly who also file their accounts with the county clerk have spent the following amounts:

Second district, C. D. Rosa, $98.95; Simon Smith, $14.16; first district, M. P. Richardson, $56.66; Lucius E. Kennedy, $34.94.

F. P. Smiley, candidate for reelection as register of deeds, S. G. Doudville, for the district attorney, and Jesse Earle as clerk of the circuit court, who have no opposition have filed expense accounts for nominal amounts.

E. H. Connell filed a statement for the entire list of democratic candidates to the effect that no expense had been incurred by any of the candidates.

In addition to the statements which were due on Saturday, candidates must also file statements after the election making any additions if there are any, or repeating their former statement.

MC-CARTHY-COLLETT NUPTIALS ARE HELD

WARM WAVE MARKED SEASON'S OPENING

Local Hunters' Report Prospects For Good Shooting This Fall Excellent.

Sunday marked the official opening of the hunting season throughout the state. Local sportsmen who went to Lake Koshkonong, or even further, for the first day's shooting, report that the outlook for game this year is excellent but it is too hot now to do much shooting. Not in years has the outlook at Koshkonong been so good. The fact that the seasons have worked the lake during the past year has given the wild celery a good start and there is plenty of this favorite food for the feathered visitors. However, if the camp season begins in October, when the northern birds begin to arrive, it will spoil the late fall shooting which is always the best.

Number of Game Birds Allowed Per Hunter.

The amended game laws of Wisconsin, as shown in Section 59 of the compilation made by State Fish and Game Warden John A. Scholtz, read as follows:

It shall be unlawful and is hereby prohibited to kill or have in possession, or ship to any point either within or without this state, by common carrier, or convey or cause to be conveyed by private carrier during any one day: (a) More than five of any variety of grouse, prairie chicken, or woodcock; (b) more than ten wild geese or brant; (c) more than ten partridge; (d) more than fifteen wild duck, of any variety, including American, cotnor, mudhen, plover, snipe, rail and rice hens; (e) any Mongolian, Chinese or English pheasant, swan, b-b-white or quail.

Reports from the county clerks' offices throughout the state indicate that there will be more resident hunters in the field this year than ever before. For over three weeks the county clerks, who are authorized under statute to issue hunting licenses, have been parceling out the little paper slips which allow residents of the state all the hunting privileges of the commonwealth. Old and young alike have made application and have been granted licenses.

In the state game warden's department it was announced this week that seventy-nine non-resident licenses already have been issued. This

Open Seasons For Game in Wisconsin.

September 1 to December 1, 1912.
Prairie chicken, prairie hen and grouse—September 10 to December 1, in Ashland, Adams, Barron, Burnett, Buffalo, Brown, Bayfield, Chippewa, Clark, Crawford, Dodge, Dunn, Douglas, Grant, Eau Claire, Iowa, Jackson, Juneau, La Fayette, Marquette, Monroe, Oconto, Outagamie, Pepin, Polk, Pierce, Portage, Richland, Rusk, Sawyer, Shawano, St. Croix, Vernon, Washburn, Wausau, Waupaca and Wood counties. Closed in all other counties until September 1, 1913.

Wild goose and brant—September, 10 to May 1.

Mongolian, Chinese or English pheasant, and quail closed until October 1, 1915. Swan closed at all times.

number is far in excess of the number which had been issued last year at this time and the inference is drawn by Warden Scholtz that there will be more foreign hunters in the state this year than ever before.

The influx of foreign hunters will mean better protection in the future for the game of Wisconsin, inasmuch as non-resident licenses cost the licensee $10 apiece, which money is used in defraying the expenses of the state game department in enforcing the game laws of the state for the protection of fish and game.

The abundance of game in Wisconsin this year is explained by experts as due to the fact that the wet season did not arrive until long after the breeding and hatching season, which gave the young birds plenty of time to grow before the damaging floods arrived. Reports received at the state game warden's office from deputy wardens in the field in northern Wisconsin say that prairie chicken, grouse and all kinds of water fowl were more plentiful. Another cause assigned for the abundance of game in Wisconsin at this time of the year is the remarkably cool weather which has prevailed throughout the summer in Wisconsin, Canada and the northwest in general. Birds of passage have started their migrations southward earlier this year than has been their habit in the past with the result that the lakes and inland waters of northern Wisconsin are covered with game at this time which ordinarily does not reach the Badger feeding grounds until later in the fall.

A SLIGHT CORRECTION IN ACCOUNT OF REUNION

In the account of the reunion of the 16th Wisconsin which was given in the Gazette of Saturday, Aug. 31, the name of J. W. Loudon should have appeared instead of F. W. Loudon. Mr. Loudon explained that his brother was never in the army. He himself, belonged to the 5th Wisconsin but attended the reunion with several others for the reason that Major Joseph Craig of the 16th was their former band leader. In addition to Mr. Loudon the members of the band who attended this gathering were A. J. Harrison of Lone Rock, F. S. Fenton, Beloit, M. V. Loudon and Robert Brandt of Janesville.

Demijohn Lamps.

A couple of old wicker covered demijohns are going to do duty this summer in a seashore bungalow as the bases of lamps. One of them received only a thorough cleaning before being pressed into service, the other was treated to a coat of brown enamel paint. On the light one has been fitted a spreading wicker shade, and on the brown one a Japanese openwork shade lined with yellow flowered chintz. The latter will stand in the family sitting room, which is done in brown and buff, and the former will illumine the veranda from a wicker table at the window, to which the electric light cord can be extended. Both demijohns, of course will be weighted so that they can not topple over easily.—New York Tribune.

JANESVILLE IS HOST AT BIG CELEBRATION

ROCKFORD, BELOIT AND JANESVILLE ORGANIZATIONS ENJOY FESTIVITIES.

MANY VISITORS HERE

Union Men in Parade This Morning—Fast Speed Events Are Scheduled At Driving Park This Afternoon.

Janesville was host today to the labor unions of Beloit and Rockford, who were here for the celebration which was given under the auspices of local organization of carpenters and joiners.

Large delegations from both the neighboring cities arrived early this morning and remained throughout the day. The Rockford crowd arrived in a special train on the Northwestern road at nine o'clock and the Beloit men were here at the same hour on a St. Paul train of ten coaches.

The morning parade formed at the court house park at ten-thirty and proceeded on the line of march as announced. Mayor James A. Fathens, Councilmen Roy Cummings and C. K. Millmore, lead the procession in an automobile and in a second car was Sheriff Ransom and union officials. The Power City band lead the Janesville section of forty-six members of Local 826.

Leaver's band of Beloit accompanied the Beloit local, 221, with twenty-three men and the Beloit Painters' union numbering nineteen. Several floats entered by local merchants followed.

A dash of rain fell during the passing of the parade, but clearing skies indicated a favorable afternoon for the races at the park association grounds this afternoon. Automobile events of which there were two were in charge of Grover Horn and the two motorcycle races were directed by Mr. Beecher. Two horse races and several miscellaneous events completed the program this afternoon.

The attendance at the afternoon program was good and the celebration was generally pronounced an emphatic success.

Once Had Distinct Meaning.

It is interesting to know just why a spade is called a spade, and just where certain names originated. The word buttery and butler's pantry came from two French words, the "botellerie" was the wine closet and a "pantrie" was where the bread and cakes were kept, and the custodian of the wine was the "boteler." Later the words were perverted into butler and pantry, and finally joined into butler's pantry.

The Last Dollar.

When a man has a dollar to spend and knows where to get many more he blows it, in heedlessly and then trails at its small buying capacity. To be sure a dollar isn't much, but if it's the last a man has, and he knows not where in the world to get another, and if he turns that coin over and over and thinks and plans how to make every mill of every cent do its utmost, he will make it elastic enough to cover many needs, and then is amazed at its great purchasing power.—New York Press.

Iconoclast Resumes Work.

A Chicago physician has made a translation of an Egyptian papyrus which, it is claimed, dislodges Hippocrates from his place as "father of medicine" by antedating his discoveries some 5,000 years. Even appendicitis, it is asserted, is described in the old papyrus. It now remains for some one to show that Ecclesiastes' dictum, "There is nothing new under the sun," was really written by Pharaoh or Thothmes.

A NEW INSTITUTION

THE Rock County Savings AND Trust Company

STARTING Wednesday morning, September 4th, this new concern, a long felt need in Janesville, will open its doors to the public at the offices of the Rock County National Bank. While closely affiliated with the bank it is yet a separate and distinct company operating under the rigid laws of the state of Wisconsin. The Savings and Trust Company will be controlled by the same interests and will enjoy the same careful management as the Rock County National Bank. This bank's history embraces seasons of panic and pestilence, depression and prosperity, ebb tide and flood tide of the black years of '73, '93, '96 and '07, but from the time of its beginning to this day of grace—over 57 years—save on legal holidays, its doors have never been closed and it has always discharged its obligations. The new company has a splendid foundation to start upon.

Is Your Will Made? Don't Delay. Your Own Attorney Will Be Retained.

Are you willing to allow your estate to be distributed in any old fashion? Or, are you waiting to make a Will, and incurring the risk of being taken away suddenly with the possibility of thereby defeating your intentions? Even if you have made a Will, are you sure that no conditions have since arisen that would make such a Will defective or void? Why not give this matter the prompt and careful attention it deserves and consult some one of experience in such matters before it is too late? The Rock County Savings and Trust Company will be frequently consulted by those who desire it to act as Executor, Trustee or Guardian. It will be to the interest of your estate to learn what are the advantages in having a Trust Company instead of an individual administer your estate. Full particulars can be obtained without charge by those who seek such information by applying at the Rock County Savings and Trust Company. Ask for free booklet, "Who Inherits Your Property and the Inheritance Tax?" which will be mailed on request.

In addition to the above this Trust Company will now accept your savings account, will lend you money on your real estate, will buy your mortgages, will invest your money or sell you securities.

Start That Savings Account Now. 3% Paid On January First

Poor Richard said: "Tis better to spare and have than to spend and crave." Does anyone doubt the wisdom of his words? Look around you today and you will see on every side examples of men, who during their working years spent their income regardless of the future and now in their declining years they are in some need of those comforts which should be the portion of the aged. Likewise in the same communities you will find men surrounded by plenty, and they're the ones who, although starting life under the same conditions as the class above mentioned regularly saved a portion of their earnings in order that they, when they could no longer rely on their talents for a steady income, would have a harvest stored up which would insure peace and plenty in their later years. Have you thought this over? Have you taken stock of the future? If not, consider the matter now and start right by getting acquainted with this bank, for here is the safest and surest place to store the results of your saving. Your money here will always be at your command and besides will work for you night and day, as we pay you three per cent on all deposits which have been in the bank one or more months on the first of January. Start Wednesday morning. Deposits made on or before the 10th of September draw interest from the 1st.

WOMAN'S PAGE

CHATS WITH THINKING WOMEN

by Barbara Boyd

Buying Love Instead of Winning It.

A CERTAIN woman was very anxious to win the affection of a certain other woman. She loved this other woman very deeply, but do what she would, she could not win affection in return. She received courtesy, kindness, but no real regard.

But this is the way she went about trying to win the affection she wanted. She loaded the other woman down with gifts. She was always inviting her to some place, or providing her with amusement in some form. She lavished attention upon her of one kind or another. And she felt genuinely hurt that, despite all this, the woman was still cold. She knew that this woman did not care for her one-tenth as much as she did for other friends who were not half so attentive.

But the trouble was that she was trying to buy love instead of winning it. She heaped favors upon the other, but she did not do the things that would have made this other woman care for her.

She had a dozen and one little mannerisms that this woman positively loathed, and that annoyed her almost beyond endurance. Not one of these did she ever try to correct. What cared this other woman for a book or a piece of pottery or a jewel when in the very giving of it she was exasperated almost beyond her power to conceal?

Love is not to be bought. It has to be won. A man can't win a girl, that is, the right sort of girl, merely by lavishing gifts upon her. He's got to be the sort of man she can love. And it may be some little mannerism, some trick of speech or conduct, some carelessness or untidiness in dress that keeps love away.

For though perhaps we shouldn't mind these things, some of us do. And when they do count, we should take them into account.

A man in every way admirable is desperately in love with a certain girl. She admires him thoroughly; and, but for a few things, this admiration would no doubt grow into a deep and sincere love. But his walk, his carelessness in certain matters of dress fill her with disgust. She knows she never would overcome the repulsion she feels because of these things. And so, two who might really be very happy are kept apart.

And for the same reason this woman goes grieving and lonesome and wondering why she cannot make the other care for her.

Love is a thing that must be attracted. It can be captured in no other way.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

never leaves me alone at night. Do you think that the fact that my husband is quiet has anything to do with it?

The above is part of a letter which reached me the other day. It is published because it contains the same sentiment that exists in the hearts of so many wives.

This woman has a good husband; a husband who loves her, who is kind to her. But because he doesn't act up to her notion of romantic love, she is discontented and wonders if he really loves her any more.

The surest test of any man's love is the practical one of providing well for her needs and being Johnny-on-the-spot wherever she is concerned.

"Out-of-Doors."

There are husbands who are good kissers and huggers, but mighty poor providers. But some women don't seem to realize that kisses get mighty stale and, huge, mighty treasures, if there isn't something substantial behind them.

A man can't stop over all the time. And he gets mighty tired of a woman who expects it of him.

In the courtship stage both men and women are in an abnormal state. They couldn't keep up the strain all their lives and remain sane.

Nobody flinches a meal with the same keen appetite with which he began it. No sensible person expects to exist in a continual ecstasy—it would soon cease to be ecstasy and become a bore.

When a man has been a husband for 10 years, especially if he is of a quiet disposition (as in the instance quoted, he is none the less a lover in his heart if he has married the right woman, and any extraordinary instance would rouse him into showing it; but life isn't made up of extraordinary instances. It's full of just days and ordinary happenings. Like meals and business and such—things that don't key one up to romantic heights. So the average husband of 10 years or more finds his happiness in a heart-felt surety that the one woman in the world is his; that he doesn't have to go into spasms to hold her love or make her think he loves her; that she knows the devotion covered by his perfunctory morning and evening kiss; and so he rests content. Without any of those soul-yearnings in which some wives indulge even when they are old enough to know better.

When a man shows that he is contented in his home; when he gives a satisfied sigh after a meal; when his who air proclaims that he is husband and a householder, a wife may be sure that she is secure in his heart, no matter how undemonstrative he may be in a love-like way. The fact is, that his love then is far more substantial and worth possessing than it was in its pyrotechnic newness before marriage, for it's stood the test.

PICKLING TIME.

The thrifty housekeeper likes to "put up" some of the old-fashioned relishes which, in spite of the good things in cans to be bought are never equaled by those mother used to make.

Chow-Chow.—Prepare and cut in small pieces the following vegetables: Two quarts of green tomatoes, twelve small cucumbers, three red peppers, one cauliflower, two bunches of celery, one pint of small onions and two quarts of string beans. Cover with salt, and let stand twenty-four hours, then drain. Heat a gallon of vinegar, add a half ounce each of allspice, pepper and cloves, two ounces of turmeric and a fourth of a pound of mustard seed. When boiling add the vegetables and cook until soft.

Chili Sauce.—Peel and slice twelve medium-sized ripe tomatoes. Put them into a kettle with one pepper chopped fine, one onion also chopped, two cups of vinegar, three tablespoons of sugar, a tablespoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of cloves, two of cinnamon, two of allspice and two of grated nutmeg. Cook all together two and a half hours very slowly.

Sweet Pickled Peaches.—Boil together two pounds of brown sugar, a pint of vinegar, and an ounce of stick cinnamon twenty minutes. Dip the peaches in boiling water and rub off the fur with a towel; stick each peach with four cloves. Put them into the sirup and boil soft, using half of the peaches at a time. This recipe uses half a peck of peaches.

Preserved Melon Rind.—Pare and cut in strips the rind of ripe melons. Soak in alum water, allowing a teaspoonful of alum to a quart of water. Heat gradually to the boiling point, and cook ten minutes. Drain, cover with ice water and let stand two hours; drain, add a cup of water to each pound, and pound for pound of sugar. Boil the sugar and water ten minutes; add the melon rind and cook until tender. Remove the rind to a stone jar and cover with the sirup. Two lemons sliced are often added to the melon while cooking.

MEETS THE CROWN PRINCE OF GERMANY AND HAS NICE VISIT: NO INTRODUCTION

Florence Malone.

Florence Malone, the leading young woman in "The Talker," Marion Fairfax's successful play, had the unique experience of meeting the Crown Prince of Germany during her recent trip abroad this summer. Miss Malone was making a sight-seeing trip in an automobile in the environs of Leipzig, when her machine broke down. The Crown Prince, passing by in his machine, saw the plight of the young lady and offered to take her back to her hotel. It was only when on alighting from the machine at the hotel that Miss Malone discovered that the accommodating gentleman, with whom she had had a good visit, was none other than the heir apparent to the German throne.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—(1)—Will you please give me a recipe for sweetening sour pickles? (2)—How can I wash white ribbons to keep them from turning yellow? (3)—How can I clean white kid gloves.

ESTHER.

(1)—Soak young cucumber pickles in salt water over night. Then take out, pierce with a fork once or twice, put into weak vinegar and set on back of the stove until well heated through. Take 1 teaspoon of sugar to a quart of vinegar and as much mixed spices as you wish. Put pickles into this mixture; slowly bring to a boil, put into jars, seal while hot. They will not shrivel. (2)—Wash with white soap and warm water, rinse well, putting a bit of bluing in last rinsing water. (3)—The stores sell an excellent glove cleaner. You can clean them with gasoline, also.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a young girl and for almost a year and a half have kept company with a young man six years my senior. He called at my house but eight or nine times during this length of time and mother seemed to be pleased with him. But the last time he called (with mother's permission) we took a little walk and returned in less than an hour. Mother scolded me when we returned that evening, saying I was too young (I am 17) to go around or even speak with a gentleman.

We are both of a quiet disposition and never seem to tire of each other's company. He is entirely to be trusted, having no bad habits whatever. Mother refuses to listen to me. Please advise me. ELIZABETH.

Perhaps your mother knows something about him that she hasn't told you. Ask her if there is any reason besides your age. It is quite true that you are too young to be keeping "steady" company, though I see no objection to your knowing respectable young men and having them call upon you at your home. But I don't think you are seriously in love at seventeen, my dear. Don't bind yourself to any man until you are a year or two older and a little more of a woman. Meanwhile, if your mother objects, do not go out with anybody, but receive your callers at home.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—How long does it take you to answer letters? I wrote last Friday. Can you answer it in Wednesday's or Thursday's paper? J. J. K.

I have not received your former letter, and I cannot promise to answer any letter in any particular issue of the paper. Each letter must take its turn, to be fair to everybody.

the mixture when the heat reaches the boiling point.

Five eggs to each quart of milk will make an excellent boiled custard. If more eggs are used the dessert will be richer but it is not necessary to use the white of the eggs in custards; these may be used to better advantage on the dish in the shape of a fine meringue.

Custards thickened with cornstarch are more easily made. They must be well cooked or they will taste of the starch, and after they have thickened they may be left to cook in the double boiler for twenty minutes or a half an hour without changing their consistency, and their flavor will be improved by this longer cooking.

Eggs may be omitted from cornstarch puddings, but the fine flavor and richness of the dish will be impaired.

Plain cornstarch pudding—While a pint of milk is heating beat yolks of two eggs to a stiff froth and dissolve two heaping tablespoons of cornstarch in a little cold milk. Mix this into the beaten eggs and add three tablespoons of sugar. Pour the scalding milk upon this mixture and cook, stirring constantly, until it is well thickened; flavor and cover and place where it will remain at the same temperature for a few moments. Then remove from the heat and turn into the pudding mold to cool. If a thin custard is wanted use a smaller quantity of cornstarch.

Cooked fruit may be added when the pudding is put in the mold; if chocolate pudding is wanted grate the chocolate and add it to the heated milk before putting in the other ingredients. Almond, rose, lemon, coffee, chopped almonds and caramel are all better flavors for puddings than vanilla. Coconut puddings meet with approval but the mixtures must be rich with eggs and be stiff enough to hold the coconut from settling to the bottom.

ADOPT NEW REBATE FOR OLD SOLDIERS

Levi K. Alden Writes in Regard To Action Taken By Board Of Control At Recent Meeting.

Wisconsin "Veterans' Home, Aug. 29, 1912.

To the Editor:

At a last meeting of the board of control for the home, the following scale of rebate was adopted to go into effect under the pension act of May 11, 1912: for single members: The soldiers receiving $12, $12.50, $14 and $14.50 the amount retained is $11; those receiving $15, $15.50, $16, $16.50 and $17, the amount retained is $12.50; for those receiving $18 and $19, the amount retained is $14; for those receiving $20, $21, $21.50, and $22, the amount retained is $15; for those receiving $23, the amount retained is $17, $25, $17.50, $18, $20, $26.

The scale for married members is as follows:

For those receiving $15, $15.50, $16, $16.50, the amount retained is $14; $17, and $18, $15; $19 and $20, $16; $21 and $21.50, $17; $22.50 and $23, $18; $24 and $25, $19; $27, $20; $30, $22.

Besides each male member pays $5.00 per year for detail duty and each widow pensions $3.00.

Our officers are all civilians and thus avoid the rebate. A member receiving $30 per month pays $10 a month rebate and $5.00 for detail. This with the $2 per week allowed by the state for each member of the Home gives a little over $5 per week for our keep. There are a number of single men who will draw from $25 to $30 per month under the new rate and most of them are talking of going out of the Home.

The health of the members is exceptionally good, considering the rainy weather we have been having. There has been only one death in two weeks.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

WHY WHO'S WHO.

(By Howard L. Ramm.)

WE wish to shed a few sporadic and subsidized remarks in appreciation of old "Doc" Wiley—to be exact, Dr. Harvey Washington Wiley, late rear admiral of the pure food squadron, but now temporarily hors du combat owing to beheading himself with his own hand.

Dr. Wiley was born at Kent, Indiana, in 1844, and immediately began to pick up bachelor's degrees at such a rate of speed that by the time he hired out to our Uncle Samuel people couldn't call him by name without tripping over his suffixes. He now has these suffixes arranged in alphabetical order and indexed according to the nature of the crime.

Early in life Doc Wiley ran into an attack of ptomaine poisoning when he was looking for something else, and ever since that time he has fought bacteria with relentless zeal and both hands tied with red tape. He can never meet a bacterium without wanting to lift it first. Whenever he sees a few bacteria gathered together in tomato-catsup for the purpose of pickling, the ultimate consumer, he culls a number of compact quotations from profane history and hurls them at their heads. This is about as violent as he is allowed to become.

"Doc" Wiley is the only man in this country who can detect the unfeminine essence of formaldehyde in pancake flour before the autopsy is held. When he was chief of the division of chemistry it became a very discouraging thing to attempt to pass off New Orleans sorghum as a substitute for Vermont maple sugar. He also disconcerted a great many green grocers who dealt in the red cedar nutmeg and an alleged apple vinegar which would eat holes in a tin roof. Dr. Wiley has succeeded in assembling quite a number of eruptive enemies, who objected to being interrupted in the process of cauterizing the American stomach with citric acid and other intoxicating beverages. Whenever he wanted to restrict somebody from sweetening cow-milk with boracic acid, some patriot would arise on the floor of the senate and denounce him in a resolution charged with sulphurous preambles. He resigned recently, in order to make room for the fall flock of adulterators, but he is still dealing in wholesome, if unpalatable, truths.

GOOD ROADS EXHIBIT WILL ATTRACT MANY.

The Wisconsin Highway Commission, as has been its custom, will make an exhibit at the Wisconsin State Fair, Sept. 10th to 14th, inclusive.

The exhibit will include a model showing the possibilities of road relocations, charts and diagrams showing the amount of work done in 1912 and to be done in 1913, and what is probably the most complete pictorial exhibit of road construction ever attempted in any state.

Experienced engineers will be present to give advice on any phase of road or bridge construction.

This exhibit will be placed next to the Germania Building, and on the same space with an extensive exhibit of road machinery to be displayed by manufacturers in this line.

Altogether, the exhibition will be one in keeping with the tremendous advancement in Wisconsin along the lines of permanent road construction.

PRE-NATAL INFLUENCES ON APPETITE.

Another interesting case showing the importance of pre-natal influence on appetite has come to my notice. Some time ago I suggested that the expectant mother should be careful (without anxiety) to maintain a normal appetite, eating ample foods. Abnormal desires should not be cultivated, but any uncontrollable longing should be satisfied, with auto-suggestion, that it is only a whim and will not occur again. A mother told her boy at the age of ten that she had constant longing for "intoxicants," which she did not satisfy for fear of its post-natal effect, and that he must be careful not to touch intoxicants. Through the influence of companions he yielded at the age of 25. He underwent a severe struggle, but finally succeeded in overcoming the hereditary craving by abstaining absolutely. It is important that mothers understand these principles.

Black Sheep Not Wanted.

Australian wool growers have been officially warned by an English chamber of commerce not to breed from black or gray sheep; to take the greatest care in selecting rams from flocks as free as possible from black hairs; to slaughter all black and gray lambs.

INCOME TAX LAW IS THE ISSUE TUESDAY

Second Choice Problem Will Seriously Delay The Final Count of Results.

The state income tax law is the principal factor at issue in the main contest which is to be decided by the voters of Wisconsin at the primary election on Tuesday. At this election nominees of the various parties for state, congressional, legislative and county offices are to be chosen.

Probate Judge John C. Karel and Adolph J. Schmitz of Milwaukee, who were recently selected by the Democrats in state convention to battle for the honor of heading the state ticket for that party in November, have made a state-wide campaign.

Flood of Oratory. Karel's canvass has consisted in a flood of oratory in opposition to the state income tax law which went into effect this year. While opposed to the state income tax, Karel favors a federal measure. Schmitz's campaign has been a strong defense of the income tax proposition.

Governor Francis B. McGovern is unopposed in seeking the gubernatorial nomination on the Republican ticket, as are candidates on the Social Democratic and Prohibition tickets.

For attorney general on the Republican ticket Philip Lehnner of Princeton, and State Senator William E. Owen of Maiden Rock are contenders for the nomination. The Democrats will choose between John F. Doherty of La Crosse and C. A. Kading of Watertown as the nominee for the same office.

Deputy State Treasurer Henry Johnson and State Senator Henry Krumery are striving for the nomination of state treasurer on the republican ticket.

Several interesting contests are scheduled for congressional nominations. The liveliest one centers in the tenth district, where Secretary of States James A. Frear, Speaker C. A. Ingram, Assemblyman J. C. Gilbertson and former Assemblyman A. T. Twesme are republican candidates.

State Treasurer Andrew H. Dahl, Republican, is opposing Congressman J. J. Bach for renomination in the seventh district, and in the sixth district Michael K. Reilly and Samuel W. Randolph, Democrats and J. H. Davidson and L. N. Witmore, republicans, are the candidates.

Fusionists to the Front. A new situation confronts the voters in the fourth and fifth congressional districts, both of which take in parts of Milwaukee County. In these districts the candidates are seeking nominations as fusionists, there being two Republicans and two Democrats in each district but all are classified as Democrats. This plan was devised by the combination with a view to defeating the Socialist candidates in November.

In most of the other congressional districts there is but one candidate for each party.

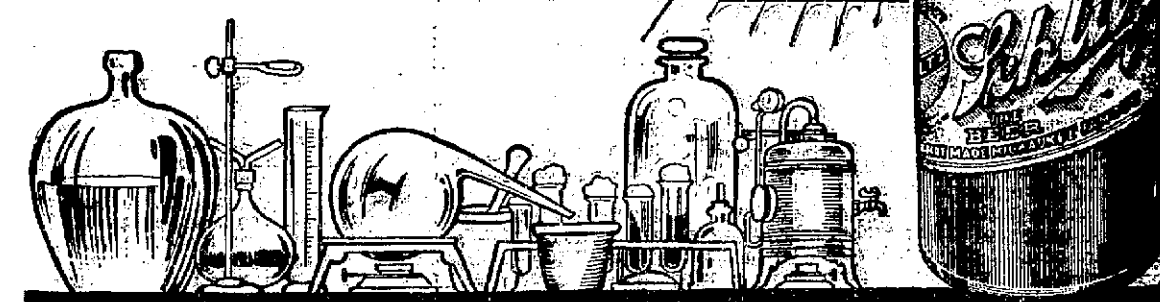

The method of voting for a second choice is expected to complicate matters somewhat and cause the returns to be reported much later than usual.

In Rock County. The three-cornered contest for the state senate between Gettle, Whitsett and Cunningham and the two three cornered fights in each of the two assembly districts of the county, are attracting much interest locally. The contest for sheriff and county treasurer on the republican ticket is also exciting and most spirited. There is also a contest on for county clerkship. There will be serious delay in filing the final returns owing to the confusion that follow the second choice vote for the first time so that the final results may not be learned until Wednesday or Thursday.

The Retreat From Moscow.

Napoleon's army for the invasion of Russia numbered 650,000. Only twenty thousand returned. During the retreat thousands of horses lay groaning on the route, while thousands of naked wretches were wandering like specters, who seemed to have no sight or sense, and who only kept reeling on till frost, famine or the Cossack lance put an end to their pained motion.

Any Scientist will tell you that Beer keeps best in Brown Bottles

Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology, Chicago, writes:

"We have tested beers repeatedly, placing the bottles into direct sunlight, and testing the same after one, two, three and five minutes exposure; found that the beer with three and five minutes exposure became undrinkable on account of the peculiar odor developed. The detrimental effect of light upon beer can be successfully counteracted by the employment of brown or dark colored glass bottles."

Like the "Pili" Nut.

The "pili" nut tree grows in the southern part of the Island of Luzon, and nowhere else in the Philippines. It is a large tree, and its seed is described as extraordinarily rich in flavor. All the Americans in the Philippines think it the finest nut grown. When the nuts are roasted, if a lighted match be touched to one of them, it will burn like a lamp, so rich is it in oil.

Nearly Caught by Old Swindle.

An American in the Spanish town of Valencia has very nearly fallen a victim to the buried treasure swindle at the hands of the proprietors of a fashionable boarding house, where he was a paying guest. Their story was that a certain French banker had fled from France, after defrauding his clients of $800,000. He had, however, quarreled with another banker and killed him, thus being condemned to imprisonment for life. The American received some spurious documents relating to the place where the treasure was hidden and eventually the swindlers stated that, in exchange for 9,000 pesetas, the supposed banker would disclose the whereabouts of the box containing $800,000. Several days later the swindlers were cleverly caught by the police, who sent them a telegram signed by the American accepting their offer, and at the same time making an appointment.

Nelson W. Aldrich.

Former Senator Nelson W. Aldrich has grown tired of little Rhode Island and will soon move with his family to New York city. The Aldriches will occupy an apartment at 640 Park avenue. This is one of the luxurious apartment houses for which Park avenue is famous and which have caused so much discussion because of the restrictions that are said to be imposed upon the people desiring to rent them. The Aldrich lease runs for a long term of years and the apartment occupies the entire ninth floor. The annual rental is said to be $10,000. The former senator will be a near neighbor of his son-in-law, John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

MY FRIEND FROM ARKANSAS PRESENTED AT MYERS THEATRE

"My Friend From Arkansas," a comedy drama was the title of the play presented at the Myers Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening. The play was full of excitement and displayed how a foolish country girl will give up many things to become a city girl. The play was very ably presented and the actors well chosen for their parts. Burleigh Cash in the role of Tom Howe, the good hearted country lad played his part very well. Robert Sherman as Greenville Dudley, the smooth gentleman from the city was a very interesting character. Fred Lutz, as Steve Coon, the typical country boy, was the laughter of the play. Anna Tripp, in the role as a foolish country girl, longing to be in the city played her part very well, and Neola Newton, as Nancy Tobias, was also very interesting.

Floating Baths Condemned. Floating baths near great cities are now condemned by sanitary authorities. The vast quantities of sewage that are discharged into the waters that usually border such cities are thought to be productive of disease to bathers, and certainly render their abluitions of doubtful value as a cleansing agency.

She stared at her visitor with her face set in a stony hardness, a hardness reminiscent of that which had marked it when Dominick had asked for the invitation. Cannon saw it and checked the remark that rose to his lips. He was going to say: "Why, yes, he was the man?" and he didn't want to give it a comment for what had been a tragic occasion. All he did was to utter a grunt that might have meant anything, and was consequently safe.

"That's what his marriage has done for him, and that's the state that woman has ground him down to. He'd worked on him till she'd got him to come up here and ask for it a few minutes before the people began to arrive! That's what she made him do!"

"And you wouldn't give it?" he inquired mildly, inwardly surprised, as he had been often before, at the remark displayed by women in their quarrels.

"Give it?" she exclaimed, "well, I guess not. It would have been my surrender. I'd have thrown up the fight forever if I did that." And then as if she had read his thoughts: "It's not natural meanness either. There's only one hope for me—for me and for Dominick, too. Divorce."

He did not move his chin from its resting place in his upturned hand, but made a slight assenting motion with his head, and said:

"I suppose that's the only thing."

"That's been my hope since the day when I first saw her. I didn't know then she'd been anything to Dominick before the marriage, but I knew the first look I had at her what she was. That long, mean nose and those slanting eyes, and seven years older than the boy if she was a day. You didn't have to tell me any more. I saw then just like a flash in the dark what my son had let himself in for. And then, not a month after, I heard the rest about her, and I knew that Dominick had started in to ruin his life about the best way he knew how."

Cannon gave another grunt, and this time it contained a recognizable note of sympathy. She went on, absorbed in her recital, anxious to pour out her griefs, now that she had begun.

"Right there from the start I thought of divorce. I knew it was the only way out and I knew to come in time. The woman had married Dominick for money and position. I knew that, saw it in her face along with other things. There was no love in that face, just calculation, hard and sharp as a meat ax. I shut down on the money right there and then. Dominick had three thousand a year, so I knew he couldn't starve, but three thousand a year wasn't what she'd married him for."

"She's got along on it for over two years."

"That's it. She's beaten me so far. I'm the keeper of Con Ryan's fortune and I just closed my hand on it and said to her in so many words, 'Not a cent of this for you.' I thought she'd tire of struggling along in a flat with one Chinaman and not a soul to come near her. But she's stood it and she's going to go on standing it. Where she's concerned, I did something the smartest men and women sometimes do—underestimated the brains of my enemy."

"She's pretty smart, I guess," said Cannon, raising a gravely commenting eye to his companion's face.

"That's what she is—smart and long-headed. She's more far-sighted than women of her kind usually are, and she's got her eye on the fortune. She's not going to give us a chance for divorce. She's not going to make any breaks or mistakes. There's not a more respectable woman in San Francisco. She doesn't go with any one but her husband and her own aunts, two decent women that you can't believe have the same blood in them. She's the quietest, most domestic kind of a wife. It don't matter, and nobody knows, that she's making her husband the most miserable man in the country. That doesn't cut any ice. What does it that there's no ground for divorce against her? If she had the kind of husband that put up with anything from a woman, all he could do would be to leave her and she'd go around then getting everybody's sympathies as a virtuous, deserted wife."

The old man gave his head an appreciative jerk, and murmured:

"A pretty smart woman, all right."

"She's all that—that and more. It's the future that she's banking on. I'm nearly seventy years of age, Bill Cannon, and this has broken me up more than anything that's gone before. I'm not the woman I was before my boy married. And what's going to happen when I die? I've only got two living children. Outside them there's nobody but some distant relations that Con made settlements on before he died. If I left all I've got to Cornelia, or divided it up between Cornelia and charity, cutting off my son because he'd made a marriage I didn't like, would such a will as that stand? Why had I left nothing to my only son? Because he'd married a woman I didn't think good enough? And what was there against her? She'd been a typewriter and her husband's married her. The mistress part of it had been condoned by marriage, and good conduct—and after all, how many families in San Francisco and other places were founded on just those beginnings? As for her being a typewriter, Della Ryan herself had been a washerwoman, washed for the ministers with those hands;—she held out her blunt, bearded hands with one of those dramatic gestures natural to the Irish—"when Con was working underground with his pick I was at the wash-tub, and I made money that way for him to run the mine. Where's the California jury that would hesitate to award Dominick, and through him to his wife her part of the fortune that Con and I made?"

"Well, that's all possible," Cannon said slowly, "but it's so far off. It's all surmise. You may live twenty years yet. I fancy she'd find a twenty-years' wait under the present conditions rather wearying."

The old woman shook her head, looking very sad.

"I'm not the woman I was," she repeated, "this last thing's broken me more than three children by death, and I lost three children by death, and it wasn't as hard as losing my youngest boy the way I have."

"Have you any idea whether Dominick has ever thought of divorce?" he asked.

"I've the clearest kind of an idea that he hasn't. You don't know Dominick."

"I've lost my son; lost him as if he was dead."

"He's the best boy in the world. He'll blame himself for everything that's gone wrong, not that woman. She's smart enough to let him, too. And suppose he was a different kind and did think of it? That's all the good it would do him. Men don't sue women for divorce except under the greatest provocation, and Dominick's got no provocation at all. My hopes were that the woman herself would sue—that we'd freeze her out with small means and cold shoulders—and you see that's just what she's determined not to do!"

Cannon dropped his supporting hand on the chair-rim and began to caress gently a large tassel that hung there.

"She could be approached in another way," he said with a suggestion of wondering deliberation.

"What way?"

"You say she married Dominick for money. Have you never thought of buying her off?"

He looked at Mrs. Ryan and met her eyes staring anxiously and, in a sort of way, shyly into his.

"Yes," she said in a low voice, "I have."

"Have you tried it?"

"No—I—I don't think I dared."

She said almost desperately, "It was my last trump."

He realized, and though he was unmoved by it, he felt the pathos of this admission from the proud and combative woman, who had so long and so successfully dominated over her world.

"I suppose it is a sort of death-bed remedy," he said, "but it seems to me it's about time to try it. Your idea that she's going to wait till you die and then claim part of the estate as Dominick's wife is all very well, but she's not the kind of woman to be willing to wait patiently through the dollars per annum on three thousand the rolling years. She's a good bit older than he is, and it's best making her any happier to see her last days, passing with nothing doing. I should think you stood a pretty good chance of getting her to listen to reason."

"Offering her a sum down to leave him?" she said, looking at the fire, her brows knit.

"Exactly. Offer her a good sum on the stipulation that she leaves him and goes away to New York or Europe. Then in the course of time she can write him asking him to grant her a divorce on some such technical grounds as desertion, or incompatibility, or anything else that's respectable. He'll have to give it to her. He can't do anything else. And there you are!"

"What if she refuses?" she said in a low voice, and he saw she was afraid of this refusal which would shatter her last hope.

"Raise your offer," he answered briskly. "She probably will refuse the first time."

She pondered, cying the fire with heavy immobility.

"Yes," she said, nodding. "It sounds reasonable. It's about the only thing left."

"If I can be of any assistance to you," he said, "you just call on me. It goes against me to see Dominick caught in a trap this way just at the beginning of his life."

"A boy," said his mother, "that would have made some good girl so happy."

Cannon rose from his chair.

"That's just it," he said, "and there are not so many of 'em round that we can afford to lose one of the best. I've always liked Dominick, and getting to know him, so well up at Antelope I grew downright fond of him. He's a fine boy."

He smiled at his wife with his most genial air, beaming with disinterested affection for Dominick and the desire to be helpful in a grievous strait.

Mrs. Ryan looked brighter and more hopeful than she had done at the beginning of the interview.

"It's very good of you," she said, "to come and listen to an old woman's complaints. But as we get on, we seem to take them harder. And you know what my boy was to me?"

"About the same thing that my girl is to me," Cannon answered as he turned away to look on the table for his hat.

There was a little more talk, and then the set phrases of farewell brought the interview to a close. Though momentous, it had not lasted long. As he left the room, Cannon heard the single note of half-past three chime from the clock on the mantelpiece.

Outside he stood for a moment on the top of the marble steps, looking downward with absent eyes. He was completely engrossed with the just-ended conversation, parts of which repeated themselves in his mind as he stared unseeing down the wide, unembellished vista of the street.

Carriages flashed past through strips of sunshine; automobiles, whirled by, leaving dust and gasoline in their wake. On the sidewalks there were many foot passengers: lazily sauntering couples, lovers, family parties, and little groups bound for the cars which would whisk them over the dunes to the park. As he slowly began to descend, one of these groups, formed of three women, a man, and a child, approached the bottom of the steps. They were walking down the avenue in a close, talkative bunch. The descending magnate was appraised of their proximity by the high, cackling sound of the women's voices and an aura of perfume which extended from them into the surrounding ether. He paid no attention to them, his eye with its look of inward brooding, passing indifferently over the faces turned eagerly toward him.

They were not so unmoved. Their glances were trained full on him, their eyes wide in the unblinking intensity of their scrutiny. Even the child, who was skipping along beside the eldest of the women, inspected him with solemn care. Brushing by in their gay Sunday raiment they drew together to discuss him, their heads in a cluster, their voices lowered. He was so used to being the object of such interest that he did not bother to look at them, and was therefore unaware that one of the women, quite pretty, with reddish hair and dark eyes, had turned as she moved away, and surveyed him over her shoulder.

Justice Sir William Grantham, of the King's bench division, who has just died in London, was a good deal of a character. He was noted for what was regarded as too great freedom of speech in his judicial opinions.

A story about Sir William was that, after protesting violently to a man who was smoking in a nonsmoking railway carriage, he sought to impress the offender by handing him his card, with a threat to have the man arrested at the next station. But the man left the compartment quickly, where the train stopped, and took a seat in another compartment. Justice Grantham sent the guard to get the man's name and address. When the guard returned he said: "I wouldn't have him arrested, sir. I asked his name and he gave me this card. You see, he is Mr. Justice Grantham, sir."

Speaker Champ Clark enjoys telling of an incident that occurred in a circuit court of Missouri during a "horse case," in which a horseman's well known throughout the state for his expert knowledge was called for a witness says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"You saw this horse?" asked counsel for the defendant.

"What did you do?"

"I opened his mouth in order to ascertain how old he was, and I guess I said, 'Old fellow, I guess you're a good horse yet.'"

At this juncture opposing counsel cried to his feet: "Your Honor, I object to the statement of any conversation between the witness and the horse when the plaintiff was not present."

An aged man named Green, who had the reputation of being always ready to defend himself, was on trial for assault with intent to kill. The prosecution, in an attempt to impeach the accused, asked a witness:

"Are you acquainted with the reputation of Old Man Green for truth and veracity among his neighbors and acquaintances in the vicinity where he lives, and among those who know him?"

"Yes, sir, I am."

"Is that reputation good or bad?"

"Well, sir, his reputation for truth is good, but his reputation is very bad."

This remarkable answer upset the gravity of the court and spectators.

The Englishman who had been stopping at an uptown hotel came downstairs early yesterday with his monocle emitting sparks.

"I demand to see the managing director," he said.

As there is only one hotel in New York now running that boasts of such a luxury, this wasn't the one, the night clerk stepped forward.

"A most grievous outrage has been perpetrated," began the visitor. "It is a badly nuisance, an unconscionable, an egregious—"

"What is it?" inquired the clerk.

"I left a call last evening for 6:30. I haven't been called. Now I have missed my train, and of all bloody—"

"What time have you now?"

"Just 7:25, and it would be impossible for me to catch my train now."

The night clerk yawned and glanced at the clock.

"If you will hurry back up to your room you will get there just in time to be called," he said. "It is just 8:25."

The Englishman looked at the clock, glanced again at his watch, and put it up to his ear, and then looked at the clerk again. Then he made a spring in the direction of the elevator.

"Henry Clay Ide, our Minister to Spain," said a Washington official, "gets on well in Madrid because he has a great affection for the Spanish people."

"Mr. Ide, while no champion of the bull fight, hates to hear the Spaniards abused for cruelty on this head."

He tells an anecdote of a Spaniard traveling from San Sebastian to Biarritz in a first-class compartment with an American.

"You Spaniards are a great nation," the American said, but I can't understand how a nation that produced Velasquez and Velazquez can be so cruel."

"The Spaniard rolled his black eyes at this, emitted a great cloud of cigarette smoke, and said:

"You have in America a number of societies for the prevention of cruelty to children, I believe?"

"Yes."

"And they do good work."

"Oh, splendid work!"

"Now the Spaniard showed his white teeth in a smile.

"Well, surely, such societies would be useless in my country," he said. "The man who would lift his hand against a little child has not been born in Spain."

At a political meeting a very enthusiastic German made a speech beginning like this:

"My dear fellow citizens and fellow Germans, I don't want to say anything about anybody, but look at dem Irish in de Tenth ward; vot have dey got? Pav'd streets! And vot have we got? Mut! Mut! Now, my fellow citizens and fellow Germans, let I wish to say is dis—Come, let us put our heads to gether and make a block pavement."

Mothers' Day in Neighborhood.

A woman in Maryland contributes the following to the Woman's Home Companion Department of Practical Household News: "Four mothers in a little town have one day in a week that, they call 'Mothers' day.' One of them keeps her own and the children of the other three all day, while the other mothers go shopping or visiting, or rest."

French Wives in Business. Wives of French business men, as is well known, quite commonly assist in their husbands' commercial affairs, and for such wives it is claimed that they "suffice much help by being, even after hours, always willing to 'talk shop.'"

Life of the Soil. The soil may be said to be alive. It is a matrix supporting various groups of definite micro-organisms, and the investigations of the past few years indicate the possibility of determining by bacteriological diagnoses the crop producing capacities of different soils. It has been shown that the action of the nitrifying bacteria, especially in samples of soil, correlates fairly well with the productivity of the same soils under field conditions.—Harper's Weekly.

Oregonian Mixture. Typographical errors are, usually funny only when you discover them for yourself in your own paper. Only occasionally are clipped examples humorous. One believes that this, from the Portland Oregonian of Jan. 30, is one of the latter sort: "Mr. Jones was last seen at breakfast in the Hofbrau, drinking a cup of his favorite broadcloth and black necktie. He also wore a coffee with cream. He was dressed as 'usual' in a suit."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
